About the Course

The annual course organized by the Spanish Radiology Foundation, together with the American Institute for Radiologic Pathology (AIRP), returns in 2025, after being interrupted by the pandemic, with a focus on vascular imaging.

The program will cover vascular pathology of the brain, head and neck, cardiothoracic, and abdominal regions. It will also address the role and utility of high-resolution vascular wall imaging in the central nervous system, as well as provide tips and tricks for Doppler ultrasound.

Led by AIRP experts, renowned for their extensive experience and teaching excellence, this course offers a valuable opportunity to learn and update knowledge on a wide range of vascular pathologies essential for daily clinical practice.

As in previous editions, interactive seminars will be held alongside the lectures.

Learning Objectives

- Identify vascular pathology in the brain, head and neck, cardiothoracic, and abdominal regions.
- Perform a differential diagnosis of the main vascular pathologies affecting the brain, head and neck, cardiothorax, and abdomen.
- Recognize possible mimickers and pitfalls in vascular pathology.
